[COMPANY NAME]

Job Application for [Job title]

To whom it may concern

Dear Mr./Ms./Dr. LastName,

About Me

This is already my sixth version of an intro for this cover letter, and I have a feeling this is the one :

Hello, my name is Andrei, I recently came across an advertisement for an open position as a [Job title] and I would, therefore, like to express my interest in this position.

I am a third-year Computer Science student who is looking for a job upon graduation. The position announced by [Company Name] really triggered my interest since I find myself perfectly in the applicant description section of the advertisement.

Soon I will finish my course which has helped me learn a large variety of theoretical notions about various fields, ranging from software engineering, development and administration. Apart from this, my time as a student also made me a very analytic and logical person, being well documented with good results in mathematics and IT. All this knowledge proved quite solid, as I managed to display my understanding of the subjects that I was thought during Hackathons, Internships and other projects in which I took part.

During those events, I also managed to examine other skills that I personally consider imperative when working in this field, such as teamwork, time management and ambition, offering me the chance to improve where it was necessary.

I look forward to the opportunity to discuss more and how my expertise may be a valuable asset to [Company Name]. My enclosed resume outlines further details of my accomplishments, both academically and professionally. If the content presents any interest, please don't hesitate to contact me.

Kind regards,

Andrei Tuta
